3 expert ways agents use public data to provide value

The public's lack of expertise with regard to data interpretation is an opportunity point that real estate professionals have to embrace. Here are three strengths that real estate agents bring to the table when reviewing public data — and why consumers still need us to navigate it for them (even when they think they don't).

Source: click here