Sometimes, being a real estate agent means sticking it out for clients in the most dire situations. For one agent, sticking it out meant showing three houses even though he had a puddle of blood pooling in his shoe.

In this episode, Leigh Brown welcomes Peter Murray, an agent for Re/Max Results who has been in real estate for almost four years. Murray decided to be brave and persevere through three unconventional house showings, even if it meant a foot injury in a house that was still very much under construction.
