The pop singer, 43, and retired tennis player, 37, bought the lot in 2015 for $1.8 million and spent the next two years building a house for Kournikova's grandparents, according to property records and the Wall Street Journal. The property, which is located at Miami's 4715 Bay Point Road, has six bedrooms, six bathrooms, a swimming pool, a covered terrace, and an outdoor kitchen.

But once the work was done, the couple decided that the house was too big and listed it on the market for nearly five million. Listing agent Gabriela Cardenal of Mariana Martinez Real Estate Broker is in charge of selling the property.

Iglesias also hired Brazilian home furnishings company Artefacto to decorate the property. The trendy furniture is for sale but not included in the listing price, which means that someone can buy the house exactly as the star couple had envisioned it.

Completed in 2017, the property is 6,800 acres and has a carefully landscaped garden surrounding the house and pool. It is built in the same affluent Bay Point community in which Iglesias and Kournikova live with their twins, Nicolas and Lucy. In September, another of Kournikova's one-time Miami properties has been listed for $14,250,000.
