How a real estate agent made the most of attending the Oscars

You may have noticed a cute mother-son duo at the Oscars last night -- Timothée Chalamet, a best actor nominee for his role in Call Me By Your Name, and his mom, Nicole Flender. Turns out, Flender is an established agent with the Corcoran Group at the brokerage's Westside office in New York, and she thoroughly enjoyed attending not one but two after-awards parties last night -- the Governor's Ball and the Vanity Fair Oscars party, she told Inman this morning. It's not surprising that her son has an affinity and talent for the arts. Both Chalamet and Fender attended LaGuardia High School of Music and Art and the Performing Arts, known to most as the "Fame School," and before she went into real estate, Flender was a dancer, performing in Broadway musicals, she said. #TimothéeChalamet at the #Oscars, as drawn by @j.a.k._. #TNYcartoons A post shared by The New Yorker Cartoons (@newyorkercartoons) on Mar 4, 2018 at 4:58pm PST Flender, who is currently stayin...

Source: click here