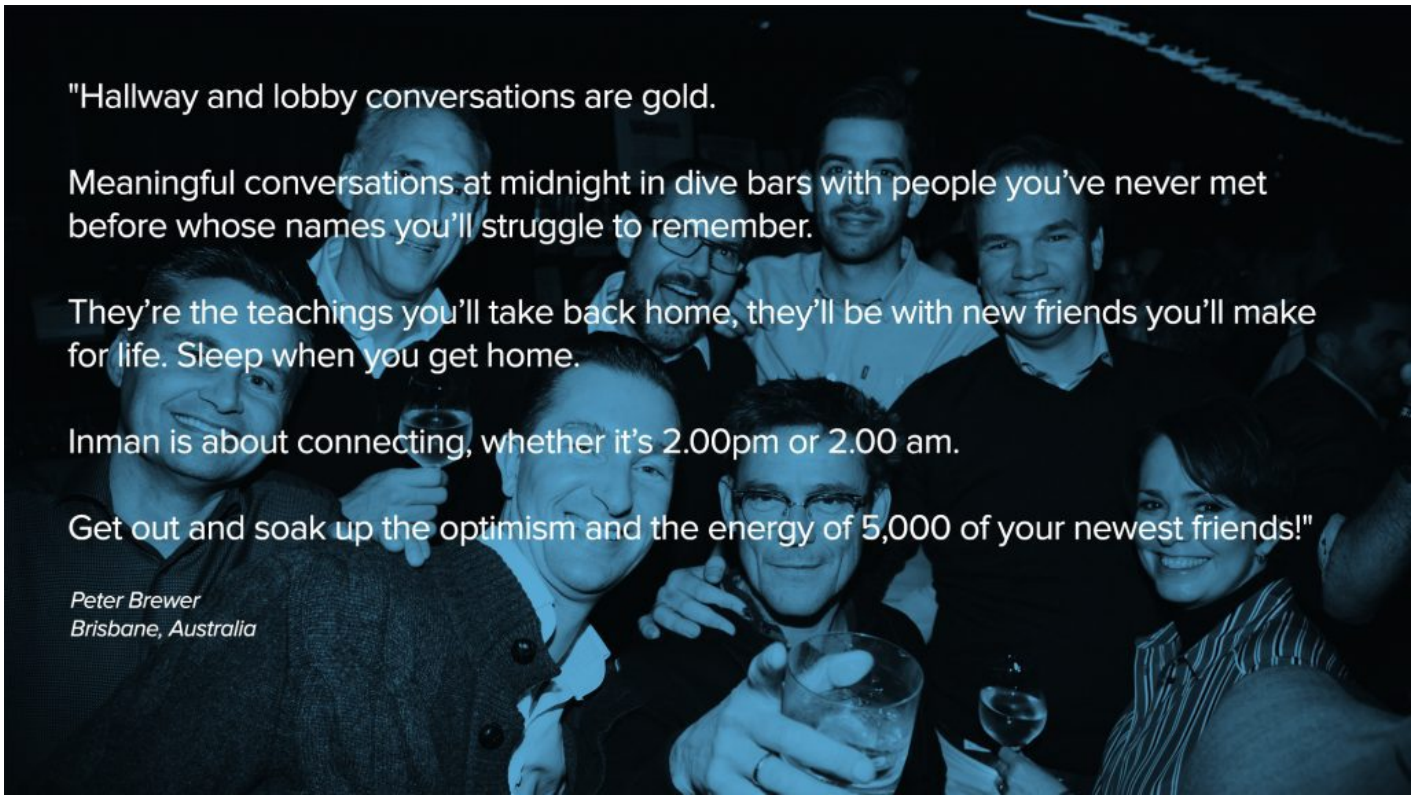
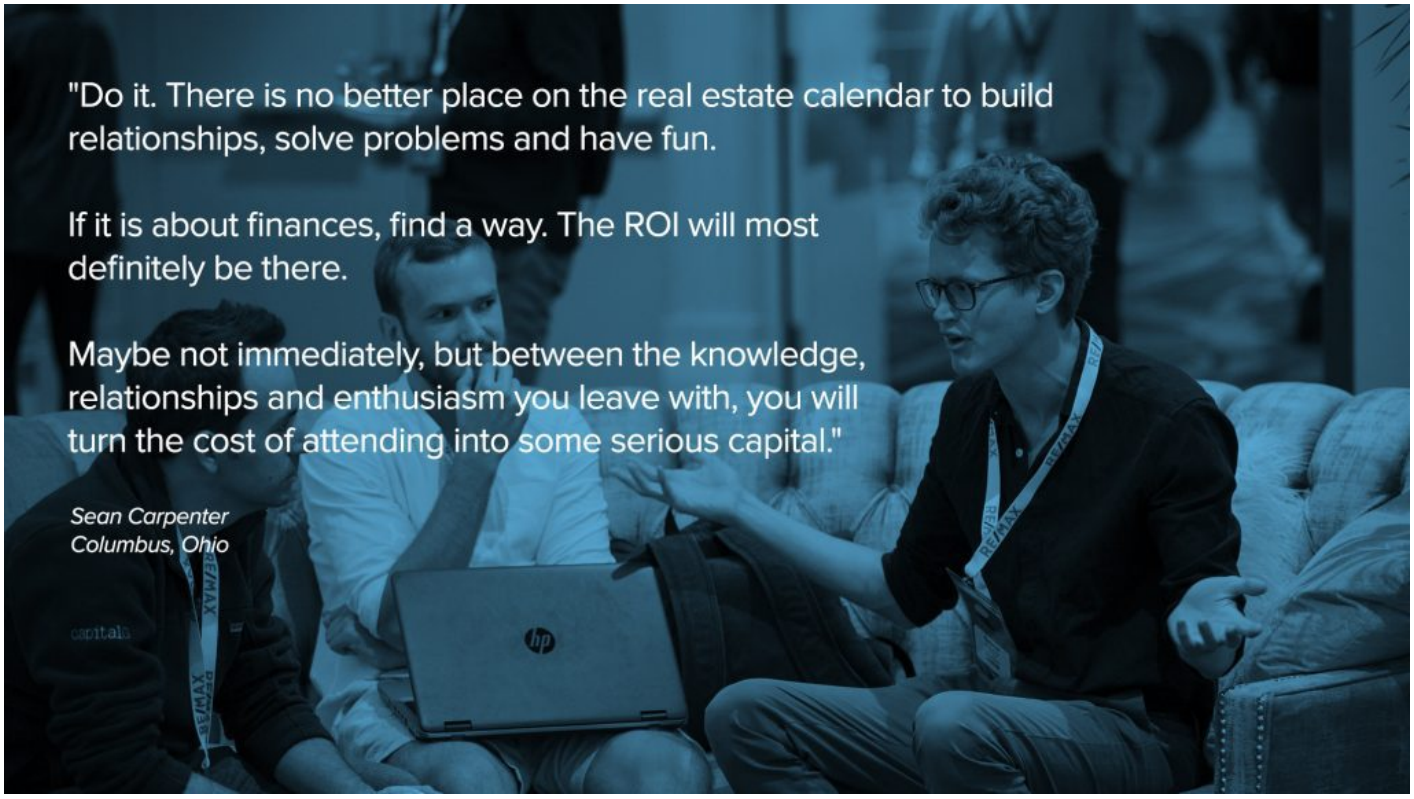
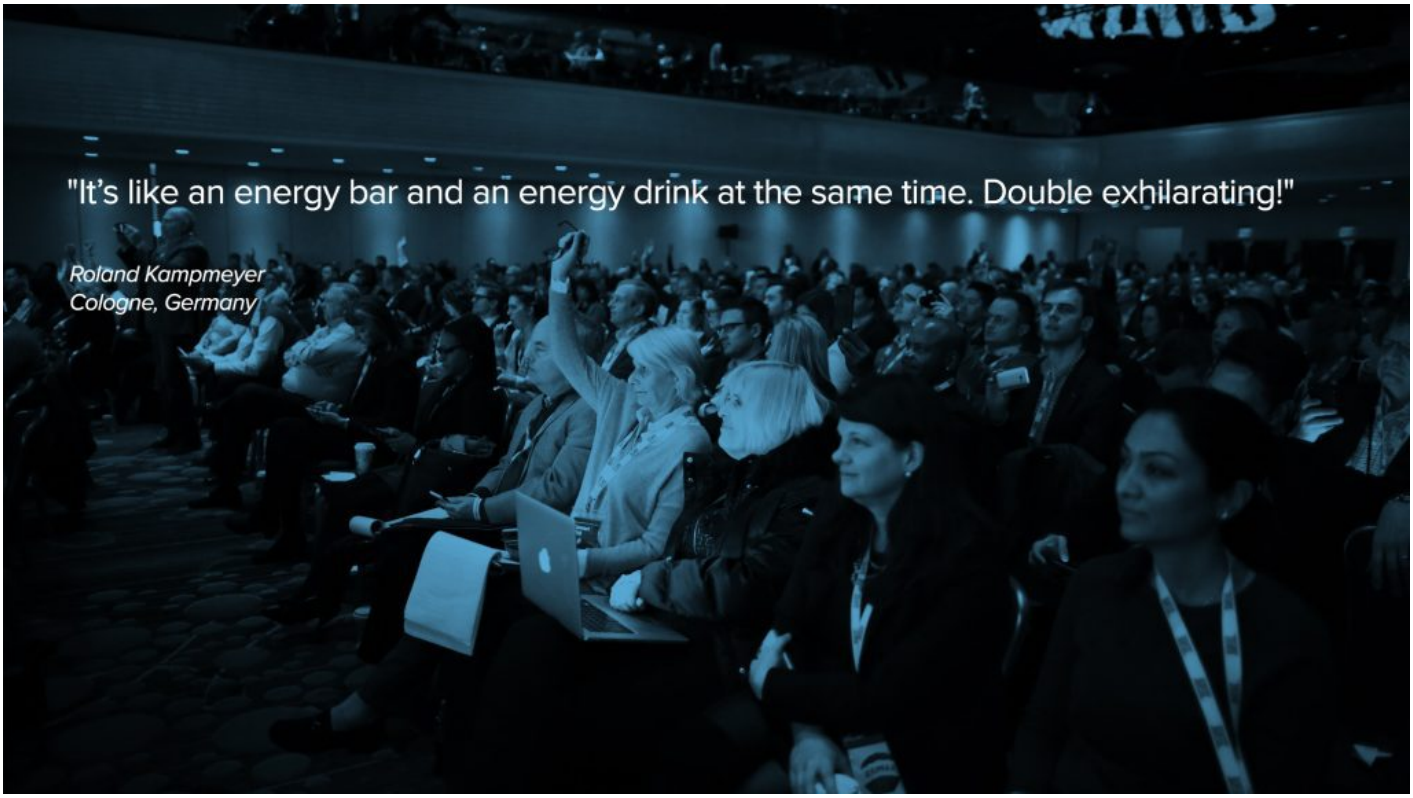
In Words & Pictures: What To Expect When You Connect



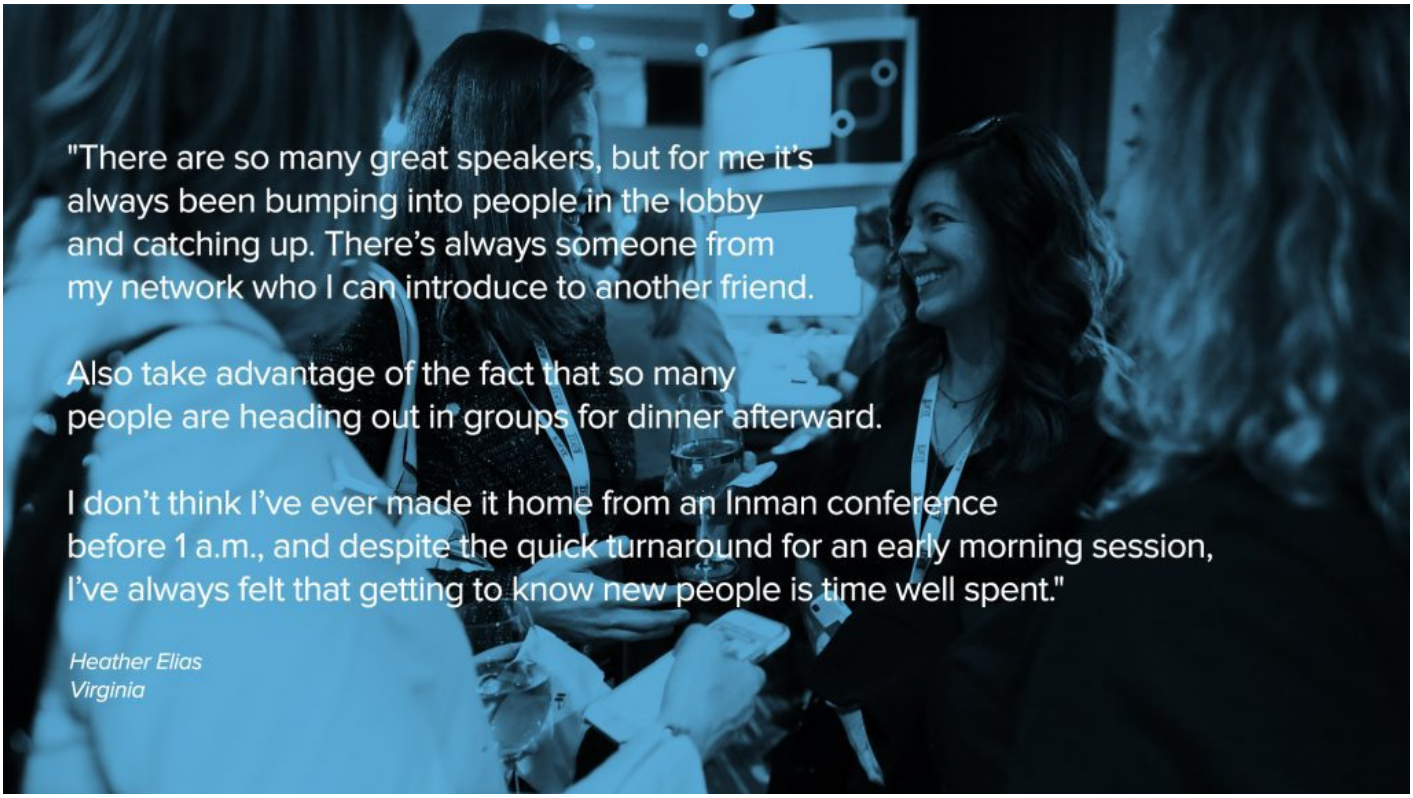


"Do it. There is no better place on the real estate calendar to build relationships, solve problems and have fun.
If it is about finances, find a way. The ROI will most definitely be there.
Maybe not immediately, but between the knowledge, relationships and enthusiasm you leave with, you will turn the cost of attending into some serious capital."
Sean Carpenter
Columbus, Ohio

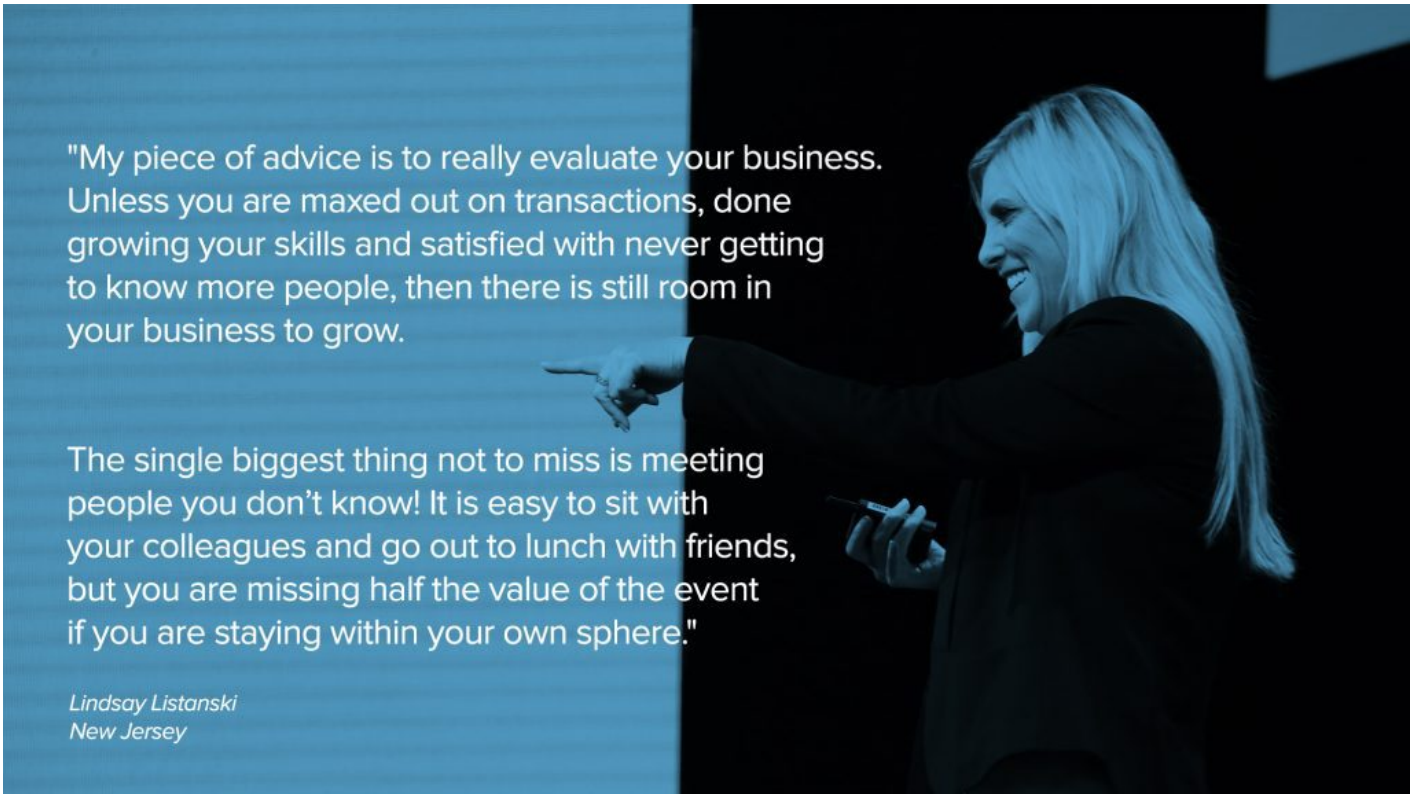
"This is the place to be if you are looking to grow, learn, and take your business seriously.
Bring an open mind along with a fresh notebook and sharp pencil; there is no better way to kick off a successful new year."
Danielle Garofalo
Manhattan, New York



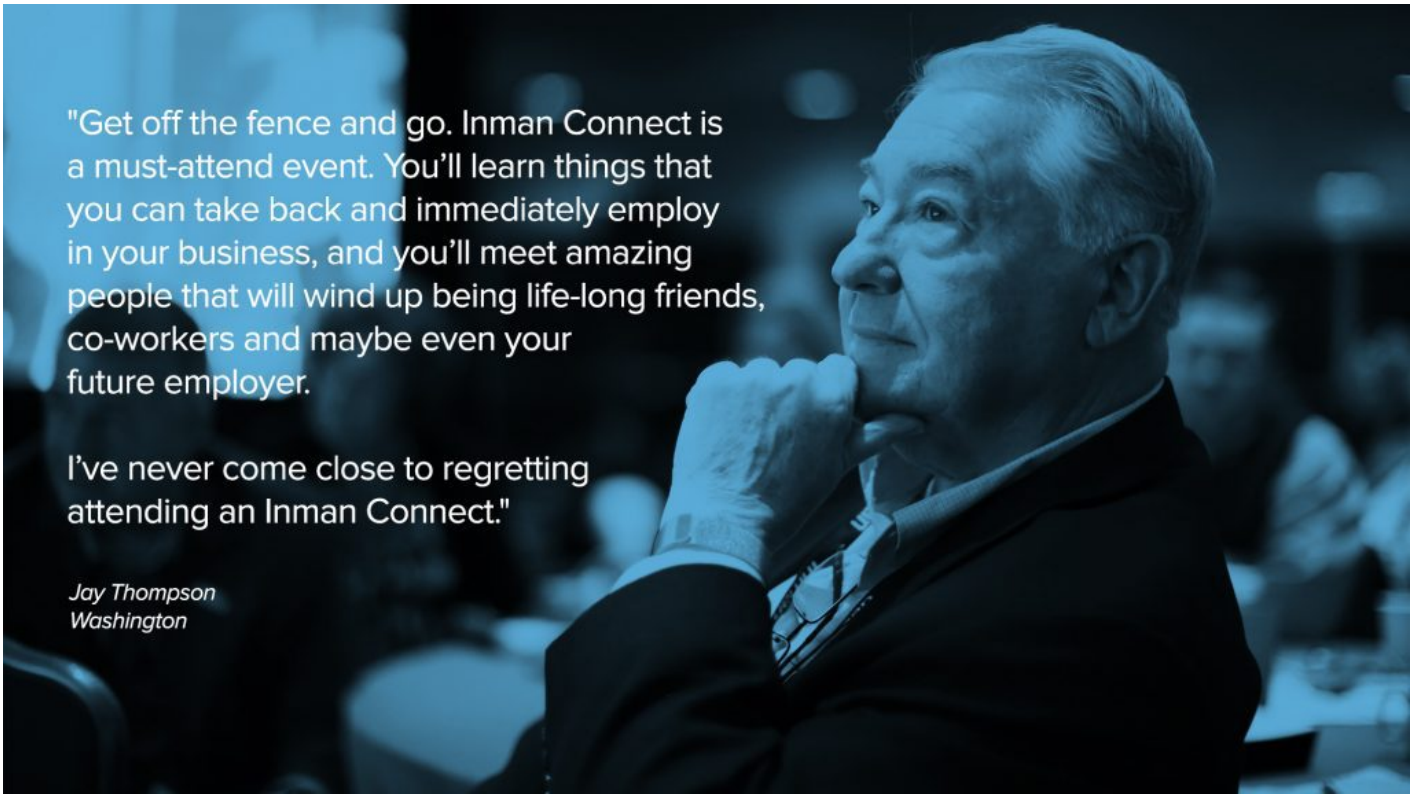
"It's like an energy bar and an energy drink at the same time. Double exhilarating!"
Roland Kampmeyer
Cologne, Germany



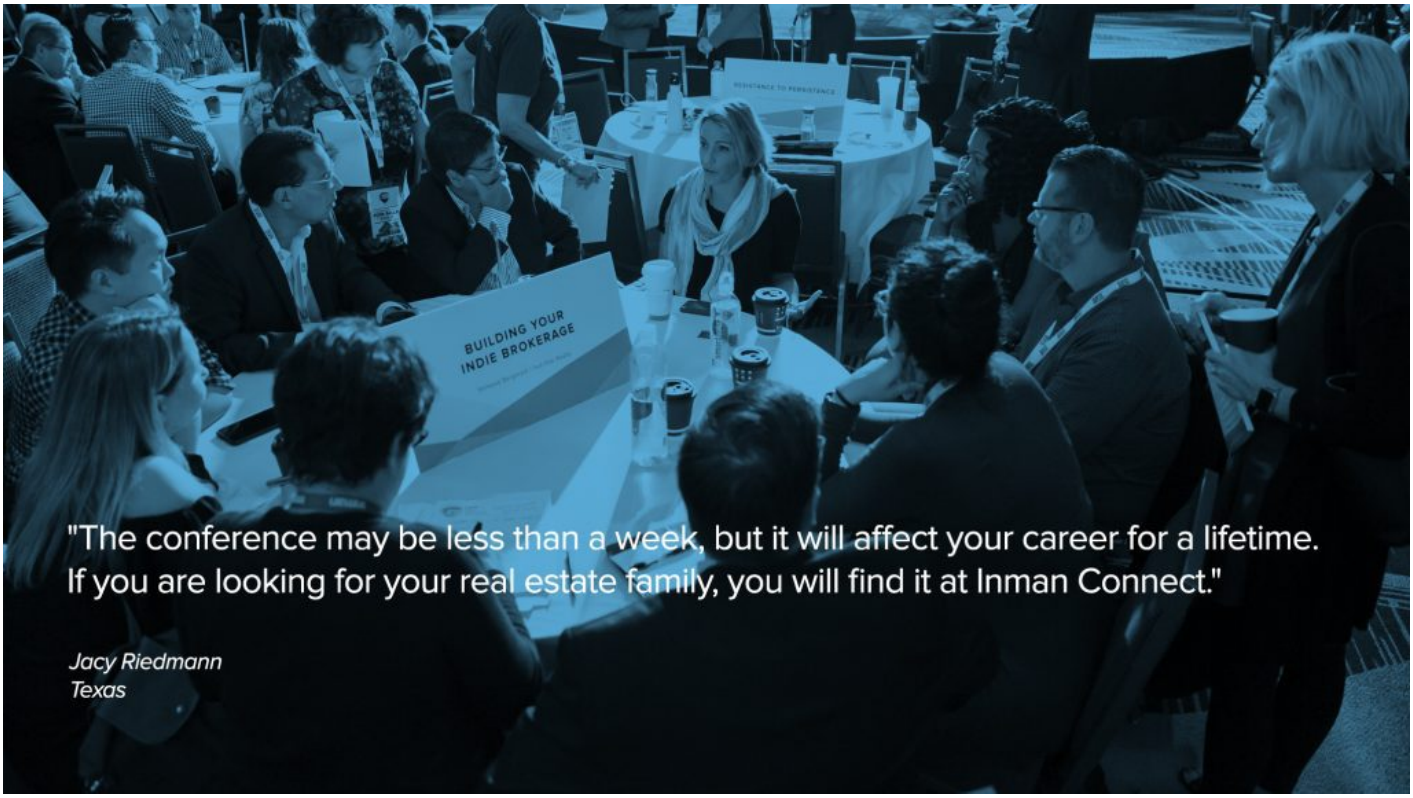
"There are so many great speakers, but for me it's always been bumping into people in the lobby and catching up. There's always someone from my network who I can introduce to another friend.
Also take advantage of the fact that so many people are heading out in groups for dinner afterward.
I don't think I've ever made it home from an Inman conference before 1 a.m., and despite the quick turnaround for an early morning session, I've always felt that getting to know new people is time well spent."
Heather Elias
Virginia



"My piece of advice is to really evaluate your business. Unless you are maxed out on transactions, done growing your skills and satisfied with never getting to know more people, then there is still room in your business to grow.
The single biggest thing not to miss is meeting people you don't know! It is easy to sit with your colleagues and go out to lunch with friends, but you are missing half the value of the event if you are staying within your own sphere."
Lindsay Listanski
New Jersey

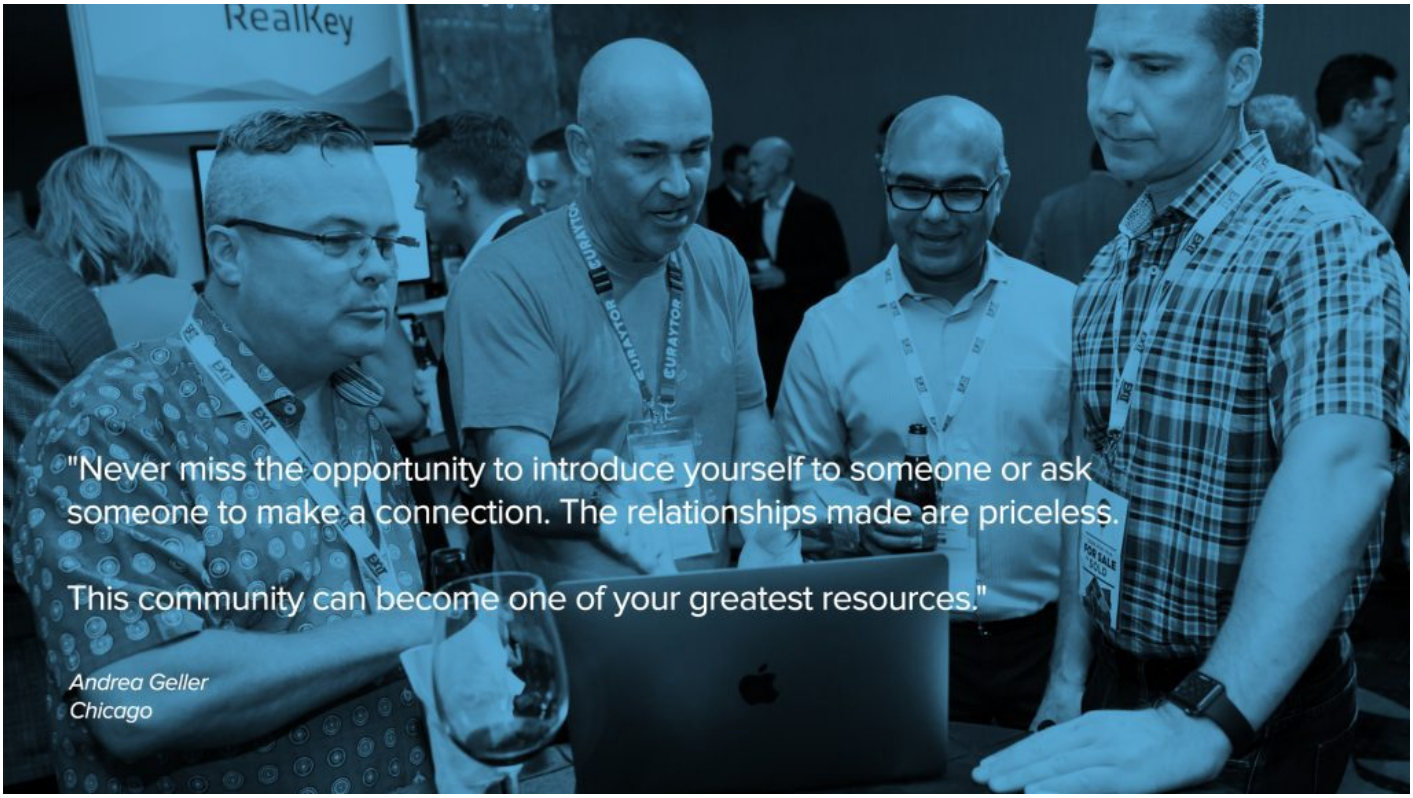


"Get off the fence and go. Inman Connect is a must-attend event. You'll learn things that you can take back and immediately employ in your business, and you'll meet amazing people that will wind up being life-long friends, co-workers and maybe even your future employer.
I've never come close to regretting attending an Inman Connect."
Jay Thompson
Washington



"The conference may be less than a week, but it will affect your career for a lifetime. If you are looking for your real estate family, you will find it at Inman Connect."

Jacy Riedmann
Texas



"Never miss the opportunity to introduce yourself to someone or ask someone to make a connection. The relationships made are priceless.

This community can become one of your greatest resources."

Andrea Geller
Chicago

"Don't come to Connect only to collect information to grow your business, and don't make your interactions about simply growing your brand or your network.
Your business will grow by virtue of you being exposed to so much meaningful, powerful content and people. Come to ICNY with humility and be ready to be empowered by other people. The less you make it about you, the more meaningful your experience will be."
Billy Ekofo
Virginia

"Attending Inman Connect will open your mind to possibilities.
As a productive real estate agent, you are often too busy to investigate the latest and greatest technology and marketing ideas out there.
Inman brings it all together for you in one place."
Linda Aaron
Washington

"Like anything in real estate, we have a vast variety of conferences to choose to attend. But RARELY are they an investment in your year and your future business the way Connect is — from the people to new business strategies, technology and marketing ideas, and memories that last a lifetime.
Invest. This event is about business, personal growth, your relationships. You won't be sorry."
Laura Monroe
California

"Take the chance and invest in yourself and your business. Connect will broaden your perspective , your network, your business — so many new and innovative ideas, so many new businesses born after that week, and it will likely enrich your life in ways you never thought of."
