Is Washington ruining it for real estate?

The perceived headwinds in the housing market aren't the rising interest rates or supply and demand — they are our politicians. Everything starts with perception, and politicians have encouraged the fear that has crept into our mindset. Here's what Washington has done to our industry and why we will survive it.

Source: click here