Converted church in Stanton Park launches presales

The Sanctuary, a 19th century converted church in Capitol Hill, has launched presales on its 30 condos. After undergoing 18 months of highly detailed restoration, the converted homes are remarkably reflective of the 119-year-old church's historic facade. Urban Pace is handling sales, with prices ranging from around $350,000 to over $1 million. "The Sanctuary provides a rare opportunity to live within easy walking distance of the U.S. Capitol in an environment that evokes the neighborhood of over a century ago," said Matt Dewey of Urban Pace. "This is an excellent example of thoughtful, adaptive re-use of a beautiful church building in the heart of the nation's capital." Urban Pace The Sanctuary is situated in the Stanton Park neighborhood of Capitol Hill, and som...
