Inman Wins 6 Awards At National Association of Real Estate Editors (NAREE)

AUSTIN, TX — The National Association of Real Estate Editors (NAREE), a longtime trade group of journalists focused on matters relating to real estate (both residential and commercial) on Friday announced the latest winners of its annual awards selection for outstanding published work during the year 2018.

NAREE issues awards to individuals, teams of journalists, and publications in 32 distinct categories. Winners can receive an honorable mention, bronze, silver, or gold award.

The organization also issues three overall awards. For the 2019 awards ceremony recognizing 2018 work, Inman received the following six honors:

- Best Interior Design Story: Honorable Mention for Veronika Bondarenko's piece "Latest fad? Tossing out the furniture."
- Best Economic Analysis: Honorable Mention for Patrick Kearns's piece "The Essential Guide to Thriving In A Turning Market."
- Best Investigative Report or Series — Real Estate: Bronze AWard for Andrea Brambila's piece "Where NAR spends its multimillions in lobbying."
- Best Web Site — Real Estate: Bronze Award for Inman News
- Best Online Residential, Mortgage or Financial Real Estate Story: Gold Award for Teke Wiggan's piece "Real estate's new disruptors: The 'PayPal Mafia.'"
- Best Tweet Collection: Gold Award for Carl Franzen, Editor in Chief, Inman

Numerous other peer publications won awards, including CandysDirt.com, Brick Underground, The Real Deal, Bisnow, Bloomberg Businessweek, The Washington Post, The Post and Courier, The Philadelphia Enquirer, The New York Times and many, many more.

The full list of award winners is available here at NAREE's website.

Thanks as always for reading Inman and for writing in.

Turn your listings into a social media lead magnet

The home search process is changing. So is real estate’s ability to engage clients online. READ MORE

Email Carl Franzen

Source: click here