The new American dream: How co-living is disrupting real estate

Today, many people are sharing spaces with roommates further into their careers or even as empty nesters -- not because they need to for financial reasons -- but because they want the benefits of a community built-in to their housing ...

Source: click here