New York in a week: July 4-8

Need news in a flash? Here's what's happening in your community

The S&P/Case-Shiller Home Price Indices showed New York City's average home price to be $180,220 in April — 0.3 percent growth over March following the same growth from the month before. Since April 2015, average home prices have climbed 2.6 percent in NYC

In just one year, median sales price across Manhattan rose 13.1 percent to reach a new record of over $1.1 million, according to Douglas Elliman's Q2 report.

Here's what's happening in your community.

Click To Tweet

REAL Trends recently recognized real estate's best in its 2016 America's Best Real Estate Agents list, breaking down New York State and NYC's best performing agents and teams by closed transaction sides and closed sales volume.

Got a lead on some news happening in your community? Send information to local@inman.com.

Source: click here